

Ashoka Trust for Research in Ecology and the Environment (ATREE) along with the 50 partnering schools/colleges celebrated the world wetlands day 2011 in the Vembanad region of Kerala, South India. Vembanad is one of the largest and the most visited Ramsar sites in India. All the schools had special assemblies to communicate the importance of wetlands. The members of the wetland study centers which ATREE has initiated in the schools led the programs. The programs ranged from competitions to students like painting, quiz and activities like awareness rallies, street plays, cleaning campaigns etc. ATREE has also celebrated the wetlands day with the fishermen folks in the area with a wide array of programs

Cleaning campaigns

Street play

Awareness rally

Cleaning in progress

Awareness rally

Students taking wetland pledge

Cycle rally awareness campaign

Honoring the organic farmer

Pledge